Taste East Timor Through its Coffee

East Timor, one of the poorest countries in the world, gears up for independence in 2002. Its high quality coffee becomes its potential income generators and has given hope to the whole country for poverty alleviation.

The success of its coffee in East Timor is based on its good quality, definitely not related to the sympathies to the developing countries. Many people have very little knowledge about East Timor Coffee until the guest at the 2001 Nobel Peace Prize award presentation got a tiny taste of East Timor Coffee, they were impressed enough to put the coffee on the menu. East Timor coffee is certified Fair Trade, so it leaves a great taste in your mouth for even more reasons - the coffee is bought directly from farmers' organizations at a guaranteed price which covers the cost of production and ensures a living wage for farmers, and a premium is added to their payment to use for local village development projects. It serves as the primary source of income for about one-fourth of the country's population, or some 44000 families.

Tasting fresh roasted East Timor coffee beans is a kind of lifestyle, culture recognition, green living and fair trade... Colour Brown Coffee x Hummingfish Foundation is going to hold a coffee tasting night "Taste East Timor through its Coffee" and details as following:
